

The Killick Aerospace Group is committed to helping our aviation customers be able to provide critical transport links for cargo and people during this time of crisis while following guidelines issued by public health organizations to keep our customers and employees safe.

We are open to helping meet the needs of our customers in both traditional and innovative ways across our companies:

- Turbine Engine Specialists (TES) is continuing to service business and government jets flown in from across the country at our facility in Ft-Worth, Texas. In addition, we have crews of mobile technicians available to provide in-field and AOG services to customers where feasible.
- Killick Aerospace warehouses in North America, Europe, and Asia are open for business and shipping parts 24/7 to Airlines, MRO's and Operators of commercial and business jets across the globe.
- AviStox is working closely with partners and suppliers to ensure that kits and rotables are available for aircraft providing transport flights and other types of key activity.

We have been a part of the Aviation industry since our founding in 2006 and are committed to helping our customers and our communities as we all work together to help mitigate this crisis.

Sincerely,

Russell Starr, President/CEO